Why Planned Parenthood Doesn't Want You to See Sound of Freedom

The new movie Sound of Freedom, starring Jim Caviezel, is bringing the gruesome reality of human trafficking to public awareness. Based on the true story of Tim Ballard, a former US Homeland Security agent who left everything to devote his life to rescuing children from human traffickers around the globe, the film has been quite successful despite opposition from the mainstream media. According to the website for Operation Underground Railroad (O.U.R.), Ballard's nonprofit organization, O.U.R. goes "to the darkest corners of the world to assist law enforcement in rescuing children and ensure ongoing aftercare," while providing "critical resources to law enforcement and preventative efforts that benefit at-risk children worldwide."

During an interview with Dr. Jordan Peterson about Sound of Freedom and his work rescuing children from some of the most horrific situations you can imagine, Ballard reveals that child trafficking is not limited to labor and sex trafficking. He has also participated in operations capturing traffickers who sell children's blood and organs for satanic rituals. Does this sound familiar? Remember the controversy in 2015 when Planned Parenthood was alleged to have participated in selling organs from aborted babies for profit?

As a recent article on Live Action puts it, "The parallels between sex trafficking and abortion are not surprising, if only we take an honest look at the facts. Children are being bought and sold for sex right next to us in our own towns — and before they even draw their first breath, thousands are being killed daily at local abortion facilities as well."

If human life is a commodity that can be discarded at will, then anything goes.

Meanwhile, what happens when human trafficking victims become pregnant? Where do you think traffickers bring their victims for contraceptives and abortions so victims can continue their "work" and make as much money as possible for traffickers?

It's important to recognize that the philosophy behind abortion, that "might makes right," means that no child—and indeed no person—is safe from exploitation. If children are allowed to be killed in the womb, then we shouldn't be surprised to see them treated as consumable items out of the womb.

The words from Sound of Freedom, "God's children are not for sale," carry with them a weight and a responsibility for us. The weight that there are people harming children right now here in Colorado Springs, and a responsibility to do something for those who cannot help themselves.

If you don't speak and act on behalf of these children, who will?

The President's Corner

"Access to reproductive health care is a matter of statewide concern affecting the health and safety of Coloradans," or so it says in the legislative declaration to the Reproductive Health Equity Act (RHEA), passed into Colorado law in 2022.

It goes on to say that "Colorado has a strong history of supporting and protecting access to reproductive care," noting specifically that "Colorado was the first state to decriminalize abortion care."

The word "care" is significant in these statements. How should we understand it?

Senate Bill 23-190, passed this year, gives some insight. In its legislative declaration, it says "anti-abortion centers, also known as 'crisis pregnancy centers', aim 'to prevent abortions by persuading people that adoption or parenting is a better option'".

The declaration further notes: "Anti-abortion centers are the ground-level presence of a well coordinated anti-choice movement."

So, preventing abortions falls outside of "care"? Adoption or parenting are not "care"? Offering a choice is anti-choice?

"Time is a critical factor for individuals seeking abortion care," the legislative declaration continues, adding that "access to timely abortion and emergency contraceptives" must not be impeded by "deceptive trade practices."

It notes that "a deceptive trade practice" is "to knowingly or recklessly make a false representation as to the characteristics, uses, or benefits of products or services or to knowingly or recklessly engage in any unfair, unconscionable, deceptive, deliberately misleading, false, or fraudulent act or practice."

Who, exactly, is being unfair, unconscionable, and deceptive? And what is "care"?

In the May newsletter I noted that "we are striving to devise some...new techniques" to address our culture on Life topics/issues. One technique is to dive deep into the meaning and sentiments behind our laws, and to do this in a way that empowers us to communicate the culture of life effectively to those who hold such sentiments.

With this in mind, I'd like to invite you to an active forum on "Translating Care in Law" to address the information noted in this column on Saturday, August 12 at 6:00 pm in the Hope House at Holy Trinity Catholic Church (3101 Poinsetta Dr.). Come prepared to listen and engage.

Roe Still Lingers

News from our PPCFL Blog by Matt Niedzielski

The Dobbs decision overturned Roe but it didn't address the culture change ushered in by Roe.

An insightful analysis by Hadley Arkes illuminates the problem. The justices that dissented in Roe chose to focus on the argument that there was no "right to abortion" in the Constitution instead of focusing on affirming "the human standing of the child in the womb."

The result: "Roe not merely created a right to abortion; it changed the culture. It converted abortion from a thing to be abhorred, discouraged, and forbidden, into something approved, celebrated, and encouraged. The conservative justices in Dobbs did nothing to start undoing those moral lessons."

Colorado is a glaring case in point. We need "to start undoing those moral lessons."
